

Monster Broadband uses its ladder truck to install an antenna on one of the water tanks in Estill Springs in order to provide broadband Internet coverage to the residents in the area. The out-of-service fire truck is from a fire department in Pennsylvania and its ladder reaches up to 100 feet. This installation at Estill Springs is also unique because it will be using a hybrid hookup system with solar power that will produce up to 16 hours of solar electricity per day. Pictured is Steve Baker, co-owner of Monster Broadband, and Mayor Tony DeMatteo watching as the men install the antenna.
